The Wool Market.

WALTER BROWN & Co.'s MONTHLY WOOL CERCULAR, 53 BROADWAY, N. Y. The prices of Wool during the month of April varied but fittle from previous rates. Manufacturers, owing to the conirsuing the same careful policy of purchasing only for immediate necessiis now very evident that there will be no important revival in trade until we are assured of good crops for the coming season. It seems to be specially important to the prosperity of the country, that we should this year reap a bountiful harvest. The wool trade waits for this result. The promise is good, and the feeling is there fore hopeful; and as the season progresses and the chance for failure diminishes, we look for a gradually increasing demand for both goods and wool. In this view we have not taken into account the prospect of war in Europe, the immediate effect of which, would perhaps be unfavorable, althe times is, undoubtedly, one of great caution and prudence. Western dealers should purchase with great discrimination, ng in mind always the value of wools in the Eastern markets, and if they can not make a quick turn of it at home, consign to responsible parties who will sell judiciously and promptly; but we would not advise any one to buy wools this season who has not all the advantages of means, experience and the most favorable If wool is carefully selected, all heavy and badly handled parcels, either entirely rejected, or taken at a reduction in weight in proportion to their condition, and buyers are particular to get the usual allow-ance on all unwashed fleeces, there will be little danger of loss on woel transactions There is not likely to be any material of be sufficiently steady to admit of a fallely profitable business in buying and sellin pursued with the foresight and care have, indicated. The stock of well market is quite moderate, and the crent demand will gradually reduce it. that the coming season will open favoral for the receipt and prompt sale of our .onsignments-PRICES CURRENT OF WOOL at N.
